Ossining Boat and Canoe Club bathed in a setting sun

October 3, 2013: I am sitting at a table on the northern end of one of the most iconic properties on the Hudson River: The Ossining Boat and Canoe Club. With me today are the Commodore, Tom Earle, and a number of members who have gathered to share their stories of the history of their club, and their concern over the Town Of Ossining's current research into replacing the building, forever changing this wonderful landmark.

The sun overcoming the storm clouds above the Hudson are an apt metaphor for their history. The OBCC has endured and prospered through every storm on the Hudson since it was built here by its members in 1921, as well as every change of property ownership, and every
